Before Slide 1: Before I start this topic there is something I feel needs to be addressed. I have Asperger's syndrome and I have been hiding it from people. However, a recent experience has forced me out of my shell. I will address this insecurity by creating a PSA targeted towards insecure adults. Insecurity is the problem facing people today due to fear and it gets worse if left untreated. This can cause people to lash out or bury it. Both options are wrong and can lead to psychopathic behaviors. Therefore, the solution I see is a third option that is not represented that much in the themes of Justice.

Slide 1: The theme and solution are solidarity and being genuine for one another. Or to put it simply treat others the way you would want to be treated. Another part of this theme is not what we say but how we show it.

Slide 2: My aim is to create two characters that will embody two sides of insecurity. The one unseen and the one seen. These characters are both insecure and will be shown in a way that can embody the eternal struggle between the characters

Slide 3: It is no longer the cliched neighborhood bully creating havoc on the streets. These characters will interact through social media since this is the new normal among our generation. However, it all begins with how we were raised. The solution I present in being secure is showing how these characters start to agree and feel secure. It all starts with being genuine and being human to everyone within reason.
